ARTIST STATEMENT

The work in this exhibition originates from the time leading up to the twenty-five year survey exhibition I had in 2007 at The Wollongong City Gallery. In the process of sifting through work for that exhibition I came across a number of earlier relief constructions and other works that had been generated by using number systems or sequences. I remember being enthusiastic about these works and feeling how refreshing they seemed especially given that I had not seen some of them for more than twenty and even thirty years. After the Wollongong exhibition I immediately began to rethink some of the ideas in these works and began to look again at the use of numbers and the use of 'the rational' within the process of image making.

My use of, and interest in, numbers as a way of generating pictorial imagery goes back to London 1975, when I first used number combinations and sequences in various formats and applications. The relief constructions developed out of this interest in numbers, with the first ones being made during my time in Rome in 1978-79. At the time this was not an unusual strategy as there were numerous artists in England, Holland, Germany and the USA who were employing similar strategies. The reason for using numbers for most of these artists as well as for myself was the need to find a way of creating works that were concrete and self-defining as opposed to being dependent on intuition and direct overt references to the external world.

From 1975 through to the early 1990's, I explored different ways of employing number combinations and sequences as a means to produce work which, not only relied less upon intuition but also attempted to discover new and varied compositional combinations that I would never have encountered by solely working intuitively.

A particular aspect of numbers I find fascinating is that they are possibly the most refined and sophisticated abstractions of the world and have helped define aspects of the world that would otherwise be unknown to us.

On the one hand they are the ultimate tool of rationalisation and specificity without emotion. On the other hand, I have found that when combined in particular ways they can generate imagery imbued with an underlying poetry, order and sometimes rhythm —all qualities existing in the real world.

I would hope that all of these aspects, poetry, order and even rhythm, exist within the work in this exhibition and thereby ultimately connect it to the real world.

Much of my interest in abstraction over the years has been in the early 'Utopian' movements such as De Stijl, Suprematism and Constructivism, and in particular the artists who sought to explore the autonomy of the concrete work of art—artists such as Theo Van Doesburg, George Vantongerloo and Max Bill. It was Van Doesburg in the late 1920's and then Vantongerloo who were the first to identify a need to move away from the sole reliance on intuition if a new, more pure, art was to be produced. For these artists intuition carried with it the baggage of the past and would never enable them to step out of the Renaissance tradition of picture making.

For them, this move towards a more rational process in picture making was not seen as a restrictive and reductive measure but something that would free the work from the constraints of 'mimesis' thus opening it up for new visual avenues. In essence I have always seen this aim as both heroic and romantic and it is this aspect of these early Utopian movements that has always appealed to me.
