During Melbourne's austere lockdowns, Adriane Strampp was restricted to her Collingwood home for months at a time, separated from her studio in Fitzroy. In this forced stillness, she has created a new series of work that turns toward the subject of the domestic interior as a site for contemplation, studying the light changing through the seasons, and night light reflections on restless nights.

Bathed in washes of soft pinks and cool, inky blues, these quiet interiors quiver in near-translucence, as if in danger of unfurling into whispered memories and shadows. Elements of drawing remain as words left unspoken, or sentences unfinished. Her rich, emotional landscapes are imbued with the same romanticism, frozen in time. With the prospect of travel uncertain, dreamy landscapes became a form of escapism, evocative memories of the past, and a longing towards the future.
