An annual auction melds music and art with wall hang-worthy results.

1/9

As one of Australia's most talked-about art auctions, the Art of Music is back for another year—bigger and better than ever before. Raising money for the Nordoff-Robbins Music Therapy charity, the event sees some of the country's best musicians pair up with the best artists, with the artists creating a work inspired by the musician, or a specific song from their stable. From rock to jazz and everything in between, each of the songs provides ample inspiration, with each work bringing something entirely unique to its canvas. This year, artists including Laura Jones, Luke Sciberras and Joshua Yeldham took part, crafting artwork from artists including the DMA's, Paul Kelly and Hunters and Collectors. A perfect mash of arts-meets-music, see the auction works below.
